What data does gaballot.org have?

gaballot.org is an independent website that uses public data released by the State of Georgia. We are not an election authority, and we do not maintain the official records. We simply provide a convenient way to search the records released by the State.

Why does it say there are no results?

gaballot.org provides a way to search the public data released by the State of Georgia. We update our database once per day, and we only have data on early voting ballots and mail-in ballots, not ballots cast on election day. The data we receive from the state can sometimes be incomplete.

If you don't see your ballot listed here, and you voted early or by mail, you should use the official voter page tool and click "Click here for Absentee Ballot / Early Voting status" once you've logged in. If that page says your ballot hasn't been received, then contact your local elections office.

Can you tell me who I voted for?

No. gaballot.org provides a way to search the publicly data released by the State of Georgia. The data includes only information about who voted, not who they voted for. Who you voted for is secret, and is not released to anyone.

Why does my name show up twice? Why does my name show up when I didn't vote?

Remember that there may be other people in your city (or even several other people in your city) with the same name as you. The most reliable way to check your own voter status is using the tool provided by the state.

If my ballot was received, does that mean it was counted?

gaballot.org only has the data released by the State of Georgia about which ballots were received. Sometimes there are notes if, for example, there was a missing signature or if the person canceled their mail-in ballot in order to vote in person. We will show any notes indicated in the data.

Who runs gaballot.org?

gaballot.org is run by VoteAmerica with data from the State of Georgia. VoteAmerica is a 501(c)3 registered non-profit organization, and does not support or oppose any political candidate or party. VoteAmerica is an independent organization. We do not run elections, count ballots, or maintain official records.
